Local Doctor Helps Quiet Ringing In Ears

After practicing audiology for several years, Julie Eschenbrenner, Au.D. Lafayette audiologist, thought too many patients were told “you’ll get used to tinnitus.”

She started her practice, Flatirons Audiology, Inc. to focus on patients with constant ringing in the ear, and provide them with proven and practical treatment. “It is estimated that 10% to 15% of adults have prolonged tinnitus requiring medical evaluation and approximately 2 million Americans suffer from severe tinnitus.”

“People with tinnitus often suffer in silence; have trouble getting to sleep and difficulty concentrating due to the distraction of their tinnitus. Ringing and noises in the ear can interfere with the ability to function in daily activities and may lead individuals to avoid social situations,” explains the doctor.

Flatirons Audiology, Inc. in Lafayette is one of very few audiology centers in the state trained in the treatment of tinnitus. “It’s my responsibility to help educate patients and the medical community of the viable and variable treatment options for individuals with tinnitus.”

“The questions and concerns regarding tinnitus are significant and worth addressing,” explains the Doctor. “We want patients to be armed with the information, and have their symptoms addressed, evaluated and examine treatment options based on each individual patient. Individuals need to be involved in their treatment process.”

Flatirons Audiology, Inc. is a cutting-edge, full service clinic for individuals with hearing loss. They offer a wide range of hearing instruments renowned for their results that benefit family members as much as the client. Patient-specific treatment is the key to their success. Patients are involved in treatment options based on their lifestyle and budget, and set realistic expectations of hearing aid capabilities.
